Lessons from My Grandfather

My grandfather and I always had birthdays two days apart. We didn’t always get to see each other in late February, but we were often together with family in the summer, so every so often, in August, we would do a joint half-birthday celebration: half the cake on his day, and the other half on mine. This year would have been my grandfather’s 95th birthday.

I have been thinking a lot about what it is to follow in my grandfather’s footsteps, the only other rabbi in the family, two generations apart. This has become especially poignant as I have been teaching one of our adult education classes in Modern Jewish Thought based on his own writings. And on March 7th, I will be taking a whirlwind trip to New York City to deliver the Founder’s Day lecture at our shared alma mater, Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion, as the school dedicates a chapel fund in his honor. I knew my grandfather, Rabbi Eugene Borowitz, first and foremost as, well, “Grandpa Gene.” I knew his kindness, his sense of humor, his love of ice cream as a dessert at any and all meals, his dedication to family and to human dignity. I did not know much of his philosophical or theological work, at least I didn’t think I did. But the truth is that my grandfather so prized deep Jewish thinking because of the ways it called a person to act and move through the world. And so, though I only now am beginning to understand the depth of his intellectual prowess, his theology was so lived that I knew it without having to articulate it. What a legacy to leave, to encourage one’s students and one’s descendants, and the students of one’s descendants, to take seriously the project of thinking about and living into our own Judaism.

The two major Jewish holidays of springtime are fast approaching: Purim, on the evening of March 20th, and Passover, whose first night falls on April 19th. These two holidays are each about renewing our thinking in their own way: the topsy-turvy nature of Purim which calls us to turn ideas and assumptions about until we see them in a new light; the Passover narrative’s belief that questioning is the key to our story of freedom, redemption, and rebirth. I hope that this time of year can inspire us, as my grandfather did, to “think more keenly about one’s own Judaism.”

May these spring months empower us all to seek ways to help our Jewish identities blossom—through study, ritual or prayer, or through action in community. I hope that you will find ways that Temple Solel can help you think, feel, and live your Judaism more keenly.

Cantorial Soloist’s Message

This month, we are in the Hebrew month of Adar. Actually, we are finishing up the first month (or extra month) of Adar and beginning Adar II when Purim occurs. So, I’m going to take this opportunity to write about happiness once again. In fact, we are commanded during this festival to be happy. But how do we do that? Isn’t happiness something that just magically arises on its own? How can we force ourselves to be happy? A clue for the answer can be found within the name of the month itself. Adar actually comes from the same root as adir, or strength. In order to develop our strength and our ability to trigger our own happiness, we must practice the skill. How do we do this? By expressing our thanks and gratitude for the things we already have. Thankfulness actually rewires the brain’s chemistry, lowers stress hormones and allows people to more easily enter a happy state.

According to Chasidic teachings, happiness is our natural state. It’s only when we start overcomplicating our lives with lots of extraneous details that we lose our connection to that natural state and we become susceptible to depression and other mental ailments. You could make the argument that unhappiness is actually the result of a misperception of reality. The Mishnaic sage, Ben Zoma, expresses it very succinctly: Eizehu ashir? Hasame’ach bechelko. “Who is rich? He who is happy with his share.” This saying seems to be counterintuitive; one would think the opposite to be true, that riches causes happiness rather than happiness being the cause for wealth. But in reality, it is your state of mind that allows abundance to flow into your life.

We are each born into this world with unique desires and gifts. We are given everything that we need to fulfill those desires. When we allow ourselves to fully express those desires and be the fullest possible versions of ourselves, we experience happiness and we also experience abundance, both spiritual and material. So, which comes first—happiness or riches? It seems that by conditioning ourselves to be happy, we allow ourselves to enter back into that natural state and open the door for riches of all kinds.

Wishing you a happy and enriching month, Todd Herzog
Cantorial Soloist
Spring is Around the Corner at The Solel Preschool

Since spring is in the air and the children can feel the change, we are so excited to celebrate Purim this month at Solel! This masquerade holiday is truly a favorite for our students. We love to dress up (another chance to wear those Halloween costumes) and retell the story of Esther, Mordechai, Ahashverosh, Vashti, and Haman (Boo)! We make hamantaschen, shake our goggars, and sing our favorite Purim songs. If you are interested in making hamantaschen at home, check out this easy recipe using a box of yellow cake mix... yum!

Easy Hamantaschen Recipe

Prep Time: 21 min.
Yield: 2 dozen

Ingredients:
- 18-1/2 oz. yellow cake mix
- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 2 tablespoons water
- 1/2 cup butter or 1/2 cup margarine, softened
- Canned fruit filling, jelly, or chocolate chips

Directions:
Preheat oven to 375 degrees Fahrenheit. Combine cake mix, flour, eggs, and water in a mixing bowl. Mix until well blended. Roll out 1/4 of the dough at a time on a lightly floured surface until 1/8 inch thick. Cut dough into 2-1/2 inch circles. Place 1 teaspoon of fruit filling or chocolate chips in center of dough. Gather up 3 sides of circle to form a triangle. Pinch edges together, moisten edges with water if needed. Place on lightly greased cookie sheet and bake for 6-8 minutes or until golden brown. Enjoy!

Mary Ann Bloom
Director of Early Childhood Education

Upcoming Dates to Remember:
- March 18-22: Wacky Purim Week
- March 30: Cornhole Tournament
- April 3: SPPA Meetings, 9:15 am or 6:00 pm

CAMP SOLEL

It is not too early to start making summer plans. Camp Solel registration is now online at www.solelpreschool.org. Our camp is open to children from 6 weeks of age up to children going into 3rd grade! We have an exciting summer planned at Camp Solel. For our children going into 1st through 3rd grade (Gadol), we are welcoming back Bricks for Kids (motorized Lego building), Sportball, Super Science and more. Field trips include LEGOLAND Discovery Center, bowling, Odysea Aquarium, and the science museum. We can’t wait to have our Katan campers (camp for infants through children entering kindergarten) to enjoy our splash pad. Our theme this summer is “Books” and we will be offering new activities and exciting visitors for all our campers.

Camp is available the months of June and July. Children may attend all 8 weeks, or select the weeks that fit into their vacation schedule.

If you have any questions, please email Kathleen Manahan at katmanahan@templesolel.org.
It’s Purim Time at Raker Religious School

It’s Purim Time! The most joyous, silly and fun holiday for the Jewish people; wearing costumes and masks, hearing the story of Purim by reading Megillat Esther, viewing the “Shpiel,” and participating in the four mitzvot of Purim.

The four mitzvot of Purim are:

1. Shalach Manot: sending gifts to friends. Usually these are gifts of food; hamantaschen, fruit, nuts, and candy. Each basket, box or bag should have at least two different types of food and is sent to at least two friends.

2. Matanot L’Evyanem: sending gifts to the poor. TZEDAKAH!

3. Listening to the Megillah: Much like hearing the shofar on the High Holidays, the mitzvah is to HEAR the megilla read.

4. Eating! Hamantaschen, wine, and other yummy foods.

Now is a good time to start planning with your children what they want to wear for Purim. Of course any character from the Purim story is welcomed; Vashti, Esther, Haman, Mordecai, or King Ahashverosh; let your children use their imagination! I am asking that no swords, guns, sticks, or light sabers accompany the costume!

Good news for our students and Madrichim!!!

Eliana Givre is the new advisor for TSTY. Emily Harrison, who is currently a sub in our religious school, has agreed to become the advisor for JSTY, our youth group for grades 6-8. She and I will begin to brainstorm about the Solel and NFTY (North American Federation of Temple Youth, the Reform Jewish Youth Movement) activities available to our 6th-8th graders. Her position will begin next August. Maryn Herberg, who has been our MSTY/JSTY advisor, has done a fabulous job of keeping our younger students connected to Solel. Her position at work has gotten very busy, so she is moving on. We will miss you Maryn! I thank you for all of your time and energy you have given to keep our Solel kids connected.

The Education Committee will be putting together a list of room parents for grades K-5 to plan social events and assist in the classrooms for our younger students. More information about the room parents program will follow.

Social Action News

The Reform Jewish Movement, represented by the Union for Reform Judaism (URJ) and the Religious Action Center (RAC), is dedicated to facing the challenges of poverty and social injustice in this country and around the world.

The RAC is calling upon congregations to step up to these challenges and become part of their community-based social justice initiative. To this end they have developed the Brit Olam, a promise to work together towards addressing needs of vulnerable populations and correcting injustices. The Brit Olam “articulates the long-term vision of a strong, networked Reform Movement acting powerfully and together to bring upon the world we want - a world filled with justice, compassion and wholeness”.

On January 24, following approval of the Board of Trustees, Rabbi Langowitz, Bettina Chow and myself signed the Brit Olam, a promise to reaffirm our commitment to meaningful social justice work, grounded in our sacred text and enduring Jewish values, and join a growing network of congregations working in concert to repair our world.

In doing so we have committed to:

- Fostering a culture of sacred and civil dialogue in our congregation where all opinions are heard
- Acting in solidarity with vulnerable communities
- Building relationships across lines of difference in our local community
- Acting at the local, state, and/or federal levels to address the root causes of injustice and advocate for systemic change

The RAC will be working closely with us to provide leadership training and resources to help us develop the skills necessary for effective action and access to a network of leaders from diverse URJ congregations looking to discuss strategies for success. Peter Pishko and I will be attending the Consultation on Conscience sponsored by the Religious Action Center in May to further develop our skills and connect with other congregational leaders from Arizona.

You can read more about the Brit Olam and the RAC’s initiative here: https://rac.org/brit-olam-covenant-our-world-0.

“Langowitz” at Torah Study

Last month, I featured the book “Moral Resistance and Spiritual Authority: Our Jewish Obligation to Social Justice” (2019), a collection of essays written by the leaders of Reform Judaism, including Rabbi Emily Langowitz and Rabbi John Linder. They say that wisdom learned from Halachah, the Torah-based legal system of Jewish tradition, may guide us through today’s most pressing issues.

One example is the rise of reproductive rights in Halachah, writes Rabbi Langowitz in her brilliant essay “What Reproductive Justice Might Look Like.” She states that discussions about reproductive rights found in the Talmud and later rabbinic writings all flow from the Torah’s directive that the life of the mother takes precedence over an unborn fetus (see Exodus 21:22-23). “In many ways, Jewish tradition lends itself to being pro-choice,” she says.

Additionally, the Torah teaches tzedek tzedek tirdof—“pursue justice in a just manner” (Deuteronomy 16:20). We are obliged not only to develop laws that are just, but also to use just means in our efforts. In this regard, Halachah falls short, writes Rabbi Langowitz. The decision-making process of Halachah needs to be reformed to include more voices.

Historically, Halachah was the domain of authoritative men, resulting in a narrowness of perspective that limited its usefulness. Today, as we expand reproductive rights, we will only achieve just laws through the just means of including women and marginalized groups in our discussions. “Our tradition is, at its core, cognizant of the humanity and agency of a pregnant person,” she writes. The next step is to let that person speak up and shape the law.

Next month, I will profile the essay that Rabbi Linder wrote for “Moral Resistance and Spiritual Authority.” Torah Study meets every Saturday morning at 9:00 am in the library. Please come!

The Solel Preschool Highlights

We had a school-wide Mitzvah Project last month making lunches for the homeless. As a school, we collected non-perishable food items throughout January. Each child decorated a brown lunch bag, and with the help of several parent volunteers, they filled them with applesauce, snack items, tuna packets, and water bottles. The lunches were taken to the Homeward Bound Center that provides housing and assistance to homeless families. Many classes also participate in weekly tzedakah collection and took the opportunity to donate their class tzedakah to various organizations including the Temple Solel tzedakah box, going to “Family Promise” at that time.

The kids also “made their mark” on table runners that were used as decoration at the annual Solelebration event, “Blue Jeans & Bling,” on February 23rd.

We Need to Know...

Please inform the Temple Solel office when a family member or friend is in the hospital. Too often we find out about illnesses, crises and hospitalizations long after they occur. This is a missed opportunity for visits from the rabbi and calls from the Caring Community as well as other assistance offered by the temple. We need your help in order to offer ours.

Temple Solel Book Club

One reason we love Temple Solel is that there are many ways to connect with our fellow congregants. A favorite of Jewish people for millennia is to talk about text. While we gather for Torah study weekly, the Temple Solel Book Club meets in the library at 6:00 pm on four Tuesdays a year. The last opportunity this season will be on Tuesday, April 16, 2019.

Each person brings a dairy, vegetarian or other non-meat dish to share. We socialize until 6:30 pm, when an hour of conversation about the book led by a fellow congregant begins. (Noshing continues, of course!)

In April we will discuss The Last Watchman of Old Cairo by Michael David Lukas, led by Steve Slogoff. The novel is about a young American man who goes to Cairo in search of his family history. Here’s a testimonial about the book:

“Michael David Lukas has given us an elegiac novel of Cairo—Old Cairo and modern Cairo. Lukas’s greatest flair is in capturing the essence of that beautiful, haunted, shabby, beleaguered yet still utterly sublime Middle Eastern city.”—Lucette Lagnado, author of The Man in the White Sharkskin Suit and The Arrogant Years

I’m looking forward to snuggling up with this book and a mug of steaming tea before the weather gets too hot.

Join fellow readers of the Temple Solel Book Club in the library on April 16 for potluck dinner and lively conversation. RSVP to books@templesolel.org so we know to expect you. Read the book or don’t—you are welcome either way. And bring a friend!

The book club will resume in October for another great program year.

Stanley Mirvis: Jews of the Caribbean: Origins and Legacies
Sunday, April 7, 2019 at 10:30 am
ASU Assistant Professor of History, Jewish Studies
Temple Solel is pleased to host Stanley Mirvis, whose topic is The Jews of the Caribbean: Origins and Legacies. His presentation will invite questions from the audience.

How did Jews get to the Caribbean? What did they do when they got there? How did living in the Caribbean affect the practice of Judaism? Are there still Jews in the Caribbean? And, what is their impact on Jewish history as a whole? This talk will answer these questions and more. It will rescue Caribbean Jews from the margins of history to suggest some of the ways their story and their continued legacy help to enrich our understanding of Diasporic Jewishness and Judaism more generally.

This provocative and interesting program is open to the entire community and all are welcome to attend. RSVP to www.signupgenius.com/go/60b0c4baba723a7f58-stanley.

Youth Artists Spring ART SHOWCASE titled iCreate
An all student artists’ exhibit in the North Hallway Gallery is the feature of ART SHOWCASE this spring. Temple member students, grades K through 12, were solicited to show the artwork on which they are currently working. The committee juried the pieces, mounted and framed them and curated the show that will hang till the end of May. At the end of the show, the young artists will receive their framed or mounted unsold pieces for their future use. An artist reception will be announced soon. Most of the pieces are for sale by the artist.

Calling Temple Solel Artists for a new ART SHOWCASE series
Starting in the fall, a new ART SHOWCASE series will commence. If you have an art passion and would like to share it with the temple community, please contact Ira Thomas: irathomas690@yahoo.com or fill out the application that is available through Edie in the temple office or online at the temple website under Community/Art @ Solel. Deadline to submit is May 15.

Library News
Did you know that Temple Solel has an extensive library available free to members? We have books on a wide range of subjects. Some of our categories include Art, History, Fiction, Israel, the Holocaust, Biographies, and more! And if you need a laugh, we’ve recently added a Humor section too. Borrowing a book is easy: just fill out the checkout card inside the front cover of the book and drop it into the container provided near the door. Feel free to browse our shelves, or if you want help finding a particular book or subject you can email library@templesolel.org with any questions.

Happy reading!

Did You Know???

Erev Shabbat Services are available via live stream on your home PC!
Go to www.templesolel.org & click on the Shabbat Streaming button a few minutes before the service.

LIVE STREAM REMINDER

Tempel Solel records/live streams Friday Night and Shabbat Morning Services to accommodate family and friends of our community who may be unable to attend in person. While the camera is primarily focused on the Bimah and other areas at the front of the sanctuary, others in attendance may be seen on the live stream and recorded. If you have any reservations about your image being streamed or recorded for others to view, please let someone know so that we may attempt to seat you in an area less likely to be on the live stream and recording. Please note, however, that we are unable to guarantee that your image will not appear. We apologize for any inconvenience and appreciate your understanding.
Yahrzeits

Kaddish will be recited on Erev Shabbat on the following dates:

Our Gift Shop is one of the best-kept secrets in the valley. Come and see what we have to offer—items change with the Jewish holidays and seasons.

We have Bar and Bat Mitzvah presents, amazing tallitot from Israel at different price points, and much more.

Don’t forget baby gifts, wedding presents and even a beautiful mezuzah. We also have jewelry to meet your every want and need and lovely hostess gifts.

The Gift Shop is open several times during the week. Please call the temple office at 480.991.7414 before you stop in so that we may be able to assist you.
